

CLEANING UP THE WASTE

In Your Supply Chain

Has your home or office ever been so messy and cluttered that you dreaded even going there? You felt helpless, like all the stacks of papers and other junk were controlling your life, instead of you controlling them. Then there's the waste in time, energy and resources of having such a chaotic environment. Is your supply chain that way?

According to an article in the Harvard Business Review, "...the performance of many supply chains has never been worse. In some cases, costs have risen to unprecedented levels because of adversarial relations between supply chain partners as well as dysfunctional industry practices such as an overreliance on price promotions. One recent study of the US food industry estimated that poor coordination among supply chain partners was wasting $30 billion annually." Isn't it time to give your supply chain a good cleaning and get it back to being a well-run, well-oiled machine?

A MATTER OF CONSOLIDATION—This may sound like an overwhelming job to you, but it's actually just a matter of consolidation. Right now, you're running numerous sub-systems in your overall supply chain, each supplied by a different one of your vendors. They're asking you to adapt your system to their various ones, all to make things easier on themselves. What if they were to adapt their systems to your needs? Sound improbable? It's not; because there's a tool out there that can automatically do just that. And it's simple to use, affordable, and requires no IT involvement.

Your Supply Center™—offered exclusively by CoreXpand™—can consolidate all the elements of your supply chain into one website, cleaning up the waste and giving you a single online view of all your products, supplies, vendors and budgets in one place with one system. If you need to add a new vendor into your mix, you can do so without changing your system. You'll be able to maintain a consistently branded look and feel to your storefront, while also being able to adapt it to your clients' needs. Not only will you clean up the waste in your supply chain, you'll also gain the control, accountability, visibility, efficiency and service you may have been missing. Plus, through our network of prime vendors, you'll be able to reduce your supply spend by 15-25%.

SIMPLE SOLUTIONS THAT PAY FOR THEMSELVES—The truth is, your present system already has the money to pay for Your Supply Center hidden within its inefficiencies. The time and money you'll save by having a system that runs clean will more than pay for the Your Supply Center tool. With spring just around the corner, why not turn your supply chain into a clean, mean purchasing machine? Your Supply Center is the online tool managers have been seeking to make supply ordering easy to manage, easy to coordinate and easy to afford. And it's ready to go today!
